"A more faithful and infelike biography than this we have ravely read. The image of the living man is presented with much skill and much candor. Mr. Lewis speaks often of the 'many sidedness' of Goethe, and be shown his weak iddes and dark sides as well as his great and brilliant ones, which we all know. If the reader does not form the same high estimate of Goethe the man as of feethe the author it will not be from want of ample materials for forming a judgment. Or, Before and Berlind the Curtain.

By Anna Cora Ritchie. (formely Mrs. Moratt)

I vol., ideno. 6125. (Now ready)

To record the singular incidents that occurred around me, and sketch the stribig his tries which awkeed my interest, was a favorite emp syment duling a professional career of nine years. Out of the many colored webs of life thus collected the narratives that compose this volume are woven. Fiction has lent but few embellishing touches. Truth is left to proclaim her own arrangeness. Should his work achieve the object contemplated, its readers will receive a more correct impression of some unlaurabelishors for the public amusement than is generally entertained. Between them and the every-day word the curtain of prejudice has fallen in impensivable folds. From its fatal shadow those alone who c into to the highest planucles of fame: merge. Yet among the most lowly of the proactied band there are many whose lives bear witness that Heaven plants its flavers and actiters its pearls in unexpacted places. Look for the m. you who judge really before you pronounce that they have no existence there. Anna CORA RITCHIE.

"Longs flow is new a name in every mouth, and a word about him will be to the purpose. In spite of the spiendi edition lately issued by Bogue, on which everything that art could devise or money procure was lavished, this new guines edition, 4to., with upward of 100 original designs by John Gi bert, produced at a cost of at least 1,600 guiness, is sure to have a success that will be amply remunerative. The drawings are, without exaggeration, beautiful exceedingly, being some of the vary best of this fine attle, and some of the very best, as book litustrations, ever produced by any artist. The frontispice is the suthout's portrait—said to be the only one for which he ever sat."
